Starting from the RSPB car park, take the path beside the house, which heads towards the sea before curving off to the left. Head left at the fork, following the fence line. Keep L at the next fork. The path will then join a track. Head right on the track past the house and then take the signposted bridleway off to the right. Continue straight, past the interpretation panel, until you meet the coastal path. Turn L and follow the coast path for around 1.5 km.

The coast path will lead you past several rocky bays and headlands before South Stack lighthouse comes into view. The path will eventually level out at a rocky junction with a route waymarked to your R. Look for the wooden waymark posts which lead you back to the start location.
