Starting from Treherbert train station, head safely over the train tracks via the pedestrian gates. Once over the tracks, take the path to the R which wraps around the 'Old Brewery' site. Take a L after the short ascent to the back of the site and through the side of the forest barrier. Continue on this path, over the 'Pixie bridge'. To the L of the bridge is a small waterfall and to the R you will see an open space with log benches to enjoy a seat before you head on.

Continuing on this path, at the first split, take a R which will start to ascend. Stay on the main path that wraps around the woodland. There is a gradual ascent on this path until the vegetation on your L opens up, giving you a view Pen-Yr-Englyn and Ynyswen and the incline has levelled out some. At this point, take the path that splits R, ascending steeper into the woods.

After walking the steep path, the ground will plateau once again. Here, you will see a forest path in front of you, take the L path. Follow this path through the woodland. This woodland path may have several smaller trees fallen near it, as well as some streams cutting through it. Mind your footing as you cross these. Walk until the path takes a small dip before it levels out in a forest. Take a L which will start your descent in an opening between two rows of trees.

3

Descend the path between the trees; a reminder that there was previously a telegraph wire through this part of the woods. You will see a sport pitch in the distance in front of you for direction. The path will take a steep drop into a dried river bed, continue over this for a further 20 meters and turn L when the path splits. Follow this main path all the way back to your start, crossing the Pixie Bridge once again, wrapping R around to the tracks of Treherbert train station.
