Starting from layby on minor road, head R towards Pencarreg. Head through waymarked gate on L entering field. After a short distance turn R through gate and cross field going through another gate directly ahead. Continue along the fence line and at next gate head L towards the woodland (Allt Tan-coed-cochion). Take gate on R and follow fence line downhill through fields. Try and spot Llyn Pencarreg in the distance to your R. A SSSI, it is an unusual example of a lowland 'oligotrophic' (very nutrient poor) lake of glacial origin.

1

Cross stile continuing downhill along wide treelined grassy track. Go through gates onto stony track enjoying sweeping views of the countryside as you continue downhill. Enter woodland (Allt Llwyn-crwn) continuing ahead across a stile and follow the route down along the woodland edge. Leave woodland entering a field over another stile on L. Continue along the fence line taking a third stile and cross field. Take a fourth stile arriving at a Spring on the R. A pretty spot with lovely views it can be very wet here in Winter months.

2

Head diagonally L down through fields and a series of gates to a wide hedge lined grassy track. Follow this down and around to the L. At the stony track go through kissing gate ahead. Crossing the field descend the grassy banking ahead. Go through kissing gate and cross footbridge over the Afon Duar, a tributary joining the River Teifi a short distance away. Emerge past buildings onto street, cross road and continue along Heol Y Dderi ahead. Take the track through the woodland on the R, turning L as you emerge onto Bro Einon.

3

Join track on R just before last houses in street. At farm buildings go through gate on L, head across field to stile/gate (with buildings behind you). Follow route along fence line continuing through the farm yard to a T-junction. Turn L passing Gllantrenfawr. The first village converts to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) resided here prior to emigrating to the USA and a commemorative plaque is found on the house here. Continue along road as it ascends turning R onto track at footpath sign.

Follow track for 0.35 miles / 360m turning R through waymarked gate into field. Continue to follow route along fence line through three gates, passing small woodland on R, exiting onto stony track. Follow this track down to the main (A485) road and the end of this linear route. Across the valley you will see the impressive Highmead School building, built in 1777 as a mansion it was converted to a boarding school in 1956 and closed in 1996. It has housed the European Institute of Human Sciences but has remained unused since 2016.
