Starting from the Jubilee Path car park, follow the track uphill. You'll reach a marker stone indicating a three-way fork in the path. Take the middle path here towards Llangelynnin. This path is marked with a small stone marker and runs between two tracks. It will lead you to a stone wall with a wooden stile and a signpost. Cross the stile and follow the signposted route to the left until you reach another stile leading to a bridge. Cross over the stile and bridge and continue along the path.

1

The path will lead uphill, hugging a dry stone walled enclosure on the R. At the end of the enclosure, continue straight uphill and over the ridge until you reach the sheep folds. Turn R at the sheep folds and follow the dry stone wall uphill. At the next fork, turn right up the rocky track towards the enclosed area. The track will lead you to a large standing stone and some ruined quarry buildings. Turn L just before the standing stone and head up towards the corner of the wall.

2

The Cambrian Way heads steeply uphill from the wall towards a disused quarry. From here, follow the path up the stream until the path levels out. Turn R here and cross the stream, following the path past the ruined building, trending slightly uphill. When the path levels out again, follow the ridge to your L to the dry stone wall. Follow the path along the ridge, keeping the crags to your L, and then downhill to a path junction with a stile. Turn R here heading downhill through the heather.

Cross the stream and then turn R at the next fork. From here, the path will lead across several streams and past a ruined stone hut. Once you reach the standing stone and ruined quarry buildings from the ascent, continue down the track towards the sheep fold. From there, follow the track L and over the ridge back to the enclosure. At the end of the enclosure, turn L to cross the bridge over the stream and cross the field towards the stile. Continue until you reach the main track which leads back to the car park.
